FORMER U. S. PRISON PSYCHOLOGIST AT NURNBERG, CAPT. GILBERT SAYS: "THE MOST GRUESOME EPISODE IN HUMAN HISTORY" INVOLVED A DEFECT IN SOCIETY, BIGOTRY; "NO MORE POTENT MURDER WEAPON THAN RACE HATRED"

Adolf Eichmann tried to outstare a witness in court at his trial in Jerusalem. The witness, a psychologist from Great Neck, L.I., claimed victory in the duel of glares. A phenomenon of the former Nazi's trial has been the apparent inability of more than fifty witnesses to take a steady look across the courtroom to the glass cage where the defendant sits, says the New York Times. Witnesses have been looking everywhere else.

Dr. Gustave Mark Gilbert, chairman of the psychology department of Long Island University, took a long, cool and calculated look at Eichmann. The defendant levelled a glare at Dr. Gilbert, who was prison psychologist at the Nurnberg war crimes trials.

The duel developed during a pause in the testimony while a clerk read the statement that Rudolf Hoess, commander of the Auschwitz concentration camp, had prepared for Dr. Gilbert at Nurnberg. The document was introduced to show it was possible to kill Jews at the daily rate of twelve thousand.

Dr. Gilbert peered through his glasses at Eichmann and started taking notes on the former Nazi's reactions to the document. When he had left the stand Dr. Gilbert read his notes on the staring duel. His notes were written in the telegraphic style he had used while jotting down the reactions of other Nazi leaders to a filmed documentary of concentration-camp atrocities shown at Nurnberg.

Following are Dr. Gilbert's notes: "Eichmann getting nervous.

"Smirking out of both sides of mouth. Writing feverishly. Tried to outstare me, then gave up. Now avoids my glance. Eichmann watching translator. Trying to look impassive as his name is tied in by Hoess in the reading of the document. Now has summoned up energy to continue outstaring game. Tries it awhile with clenched teeth and gives up."

Dr. Gilbert was barred from giving a professional appraisal of Eichmann's character when the court upheld a protest by Eichmann's counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius, says the New York Times.

But he said later that Eichmann was obviously suffering from schizoid apathy insensitivity and a lack of empathy, the understanding of others. "He (Eichmann) is beginning to lose his calm," Dr. Gilbert said. "He looks like an insignificant clerk and this is not surprising because he flowered during the heyday of mediocrity in Germany, a period when many mediocre personalities rose to positions of great power."

"Will he break under cross-examination?" Dr. Gilbert was asked. "You do not expect a schizoid to break," Dr. Gilbert said. "He is not sensitive. But maybe he is wearing thin under the strain." Dr. Gilbert said there were many schizoids about but that they were generally harmless until "a sick society needs executioners, then they turn up."

A hitherto unpublished statement penciled fifteen years ago in a cell in Nurnberg by Hitler's principal executioner of Jews, which describes a vivid facet of Adolf Eichmann's mass-extermination operations, was made available to the New York Herald Tribune in March. The author of the signed statement was Rudolf Hoess, commandant of Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland. At the time he wrote it he was a witness at the Nurnberg war criminal trials, and afterwards was himself tried and convicted of war crimes in Poland and hanged there in 1947.

Hoess' statement gives a matter-of-fact description of his own mass-murder operations, with particular emphasis on the rate of shipments of Jewish victims to Auschwitz for gassing under the transport plan set up by Eichmann.

Although Hoess freely testified about these matters before he was hanged, this particular document is of special interest because of the circumstances under which it was written and turned over to an American official at the trials.

This official, then the American prison psychologist at Nurnberg with the rank of captain, is Dr. Gustave M. Gilbert, now professor of psychology and head of the department of psychology at Long Island University. The document is in his possession.

What happened was as follows:

The war criminal trials were proceeding at Nurnberg when Hoess was captured and brought there as a witness, says the New York Herald Tribune. Since it was too late to prepare the case against him for these trial sessions, he was held in the prison to testify in the cases against the other war criminals, of whom Hermann Goering was the top-ranking Nazi leader.

Goering was worrying about his forthcoming defense case, Dr. Gilbert said in an interview at his home in Great Neck, Long Island, and he was in a mood for challenging the statement that Eichmann had sent 2,500,000 Jews to Auschwitz for extermination by Hoess.

Dr. Gilbert, who spoke German fluently and who was assigned to stay with the Nurnberg prisoners at all times, both in court and in the prison, had the most intimate contact with the war criminals of any official at the trials. Goering asked Dr. Gilbert if he would put to Hoess, in his cell in the prison, this question:

How was it possible, even technically to exterminate 2,500,000 people in three and a half years at the Auschwitz camp?

The American psychologist agreed to pass the question on to Hoess, and in fact wrote it out for him on a sheet of paper. And Hoess apparently taking the question as a bona valid and demanding query from a top boss — Goering — answered it with the care of a conscientious workman giving a factual inventory of an assignment efficiently carried out by him, though with some possible error in the estimates made by a third person, Eichmann.

A description of the extermination procedure is the following translation, supplied by Dr. Gustave M. Gilbert, of an explanation by Col. Rudolf Hoess, commandant of Auschwitz-Birkenau, of how Jews were exterminated at the concentration camp. Col. Hoess wrote this, at Dr. Gilbert's request, while he was being held at the Nurnberg war criminals' trials as a witness, says the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Gilbert was a psychologist for the American prosecution staff at the trials.

The extermination procedure in Auschwitz-Birkenau went as follows:

"The transport trains with the Jews destined for extermination came in on a spur track especially constructed for this purpose up to the immediate vicinity of the extermination chambers. The arrival was previously advised from the dispatching office through a teletype from Obersturmbannführer Eichmann of the RSHA. They had distinguishing consecutive numbers and letters to avoid a confusion with other prisoner transports. All the teletypes pertaining to these transports had the notation: 'To be treated according to the directives for special handling.'

"These trains were closed freight cars and generally contained about 2,000 people. After the arrival of the trains on the above-mentioned ramp, the accompanying railway personnel and guards — members of the Security or Order Police — had to leave the place. Only the transport commander remained to complete the numerical transfer to the camp officer-of-the-day.

"After the unloading and counting — lists of names were not provided — all the people had to march by two SS medical duty officers, who determined which were fit or unfit for work. On the average 25 per cent were found fit for work. Those fit for work were immediately marched into the camp to change clothes and be taken in. All baggage remained on the ramp, to be stored and sorted after those unfit for work had also been taken away.

"The men, women, and children of those unfit for work were also separated and marched to the next available extermination chamber. Those who could not walk and women with little children were taken there in trucks.

"When they arrived, all had to undress completely in rooms which were made to look as if they were set up for delousing purposes. The steady work detail which worked at these installations — who were also billeted there and did not come in contact with the rest of the camp prisoners — helped in the undressing process and advised the skeptical ones to get ready so that the others would not have so long to wait. They were also told to note where they left their things, so that they could find them immediately after the bath. All this was done to dispel any suspicions that might arise.

"After the undressing they went into the next room, the gas chamber. This was set up like a bath, i.e. showers, pipes drains, etc. had been installed. As soon as the entire transport was in the chamber, the door was closed and the gas thrown in through a special opening in the ceiling — it was Cyclone B, crystalline Prussic acid which volatilized immediately, i.e. became effective immediately upon contact with oxygen.

"The people became stunned with the first breath of it, and the killing took three to fifteen minutes according to the weather and the number of those locked in. After this period there was no more movement. Thirty minutes after the gas had been thrown in, the chambers were opened and the removal of the corpses to the crematoria was begun. In all the years I knew of not a single case where any one came out of the chambers alive. After being taken out, the hair was cut off the women's heads and any rings or gold teeth were removed by prisoner dentists employed in the detail.

"In Birkenau, there were five installations: two large crematoria with a capacity of 2,000 people per twenty-four hours, i.e. in the gas chamber up to 2,500 people could be killed, inside of twenty-four hours the double ovens (heated with coke) could accommodate 2,000 at most; two installations each with four large double ovens could get rid of approximately 1,500 people.

"The burning in open pits was virtually unlimited. According to my calculations one could burn up to 8,000 people in twenty-four hours by this method. It was therefore possible to exterminate and get rid of as many as 10,000 people in twenty-four hours by the above-described methods.

"As I recall, this number was reached only once in 1944, when train delays caused five transports to arrive all on one day. The ashes were pulverized and thrown into the Weichsel River at secluded spots, and were then carried away by the stream.

"Taking the number 2,500,000, which, according to Eichmann was the number sent to Auschwitz for extermination, there were on the average two transports daily with 4,000 people — 25 per cent fit for work, 3,000 for extermination. Allowing for pauses between the major actions (about nine months altogether), there remained twenty-seven months at 90,000 people a month — 2,430,000 people. That is the technically possible figure.

"I must accept Eichmann's figure, since he was the only SS officer who was allowed to keep a record of this extermination action by order of the Reichsführer SS. All others who had anything to do with this had to destroy their records immediately. Eichmann gave me this number when he was ordered to report to Himmler in April, 1945. I had no record.

"In my judgment the figure seems far too high. If I add up the figures of the main mass actions" which I still have in my head, and make allowance for error, according to my calculations there were at most 1,500,000 from the beginning of 1941 to the end of 1944. But these are my estimates which I cannot prove."

Dr. Gilbert has in his possession in his new, split-level house at 9 Crystal Road, Great Neck, many boxes of documents similar to this one mentioning Eichmann, says The New York Herald Tribune. These statements written out by the prisoners for him, autobiographical material in their own handwriting, I.Q. and other psychological tests, memoranda given to him by the prisoners, communications of all kinds, and even drawings and scribbled jokes.

Dr. Gilbert has drawn on some of this material in two published volumes, one "Nuremberg Diary," originally published by Farrar, Straus and Cudahy in 1947 and now newly reprinted as a paperback Signet Book by the New American Library, and the other a scholarly work, "The Psychology of Dictatorship," published by the Ronald Press Company, New York, in 1950.

Nurnberg 24. April 1946 RUDOLF HOESS.

The psychologist, who stayed with the prisoners in the courtroom dock throughout the Nurnberg trials, hearing their confidences, complaints, pleas, and prison cell plots against one another, has strong convictions about the debated propriety of the Eichmann trials.

He deplores the hair-splitting legalisms which are being raised both in Israel and in other countries over the right of Israel to try Eichmann and the view expressed in some quarters that it might be better not to reawaken past horrors.

"I am not concerned about the criminals who perpetrated these mass-extermination crimes, but I am concerned about the harboring of the crime itself by society," he said. Photographs of the Nurnberg trials were strewn over his desk, along with extermination-camp atrocity pictures from his files.

"I am worried that the lesson of Nurnberg may be forgotten by the world. That lesson dealt with the most gruesome episode in human history. It was a lesson involving the ability of the human race to survive with these continuing ethnic conflicts."

Saying that what was basically involved in the war-criminal trials of 1946 was a defect in society, taking the form of bigotry, which

Social Notes — Montreal

Miss Elaine Ziderman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myer Ziderman, 2415 McNulty Avenue, and the fiancee of Samuel Gisser, 4100 Kindersley Avenue, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gisser, was honoured at a luncheon, with ninety guests present, given by her mother, in the Mackenzie Room of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. Miss Ziderman wore a black chiffon sheath, made with a draped bodice; and had a corsage of white orchids. A centerpiece of spring flowers adorned the table. The marriage will take place on September 4, at Shaare Zion Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Freed, 6858 Bally Road, gave a luncheon, with fifty guests, in the Boot Room of Piazza Tomasso, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Keena; sister of David Freed; granddaughter of Mrs. Clara Jacobson, 6129 Prince of Wales Avenue, and the late Isaac Jacobson; and of M. Freed, 5698 Jeanne Mance Street, and the late Mrs. Esther Freed. The hostess wore a black, silk, shantung sheath, with a black hat; and had a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Clara Jacobson was in a blue, silk, printed sheath, with its own jacket. Keena wore a white dress, embroidered down the front, with full skirt; and had a wristlet of baby pink roses. A pink and white birthday cake, with an arrangement of pink and white carnations and gladioli, adorned the table. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Freed were at home to the immediate family and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Stein, 4230 Melrose Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Stephen Earl, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Adath Jeshurun Hadrath Kodesh Synagogue. He is the brother of Boris Stein; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. B. Stein, 2219 Maplewood Avenue. Kiddush was observed. The following evening, Mr. and Mrs. Stein, were hosts to two hundred guests at a dinner-dance in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Martin Stein wore a white Spanish lace cocktail dress, over blue silk; and a corsage of white orchids. Seated at the head table with the family were: A. Golub, Stephen Earl's teacher; Robert Lash, Barry Pinsky, Robert Stein, Barry Stein, and Peter Yaphe. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke; and Mr. Golub asked the blessing over the challah. The blue and yellow bar-mitzvah cake was arranged with centerpieces of blue and yellow carnations. Here for the celebration were: Mr. and Mrs. B. Wacks, Mr. and Mrs. L. Wacks, Mrs. B. Kaufman, and Howard; Mrs. H. Jacobson, Mrs. M. Wacks, and M. Wacks, all of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Melamed, 614 Sixty-Fifth Avenue, L'Abord-a-Plouffe, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Nadie, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Adath Jeshurun Hadrath Kodesh Synagogue. He is the brother of Sharon, aged nine years; and Franceen, nineteen months; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooperman, 2705 Bedford Road; and of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Melamed, 639 Sixty-Eighth Avenue, L'Abord-a-Plouffe. Afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Melamed were hosts to one hundred and forty-five guests at a Kiddush luncheon in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Melamed wore a white, shantung dress, under a matching coat lined in print; also a blue, iridescent hat. Mrs. Bernard Melamed, was in a blue cotton lace dress; with a flowered hat. Mrs. Cooperman was in a black and grey cotton lace dress; with a white flowered hat. Sharon wore a white silk party dress, embroidered with lilac-coloured trimming. Those who placed small flags in the bar-mitzvah cake were: Louis Melamed, cousin, who acted as master of ceremonies; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Meland, Mrs. Theodore Zaklas, Aaron Adler, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Riet, Mr. and Mrs. Myer Steinmetz, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Melamed, Mr. and Mrs. Z. Freeman, Mrs. Esther Schneiderman, Abe Cooperman, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Melamed, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooperman, and the parents and children. Seated at the head table were the family. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke. His grandfather, Bernard Melamed, asked a blessing over the challah. The table held a blue and white bar-mitzvah cake, and centerpieces of blue and white carnations and gladioli. Mr. and Mrs. Z. Freeman, and Debra Ann, of Hamilton, Ont., were here for the occasion.

ZACKS-COOPER

The marriage of Miss Beverley Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cooper, 18 Frank Crescent, to Harold Zacks, son of Mrs. Etta Zacks, 310 Bridgeport Road, Waterloo, Ont., and the late Archie Zacks, was solemnized on Wednesday, May 24, at half-past five o'clock, at Beth Tzedec Synagogue, by Rabbi Stuart Rosenberg, and Rabbi P. Rosensweig, of Kitchener, Ont, assisted by Cantor Joseph Cooper. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of white peau de soie, with portrait neckline; short sleeves; and fitted bodice and skirt, both trimmed with lace applique, and seed-pearl beads; and had a train from the waist, which was held by two flowers of self-material. Her fingertip, illusion veil was combined with a crown of iridescent crystal beads; and she carried orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Judy Shub was matron of honour, wearing a pink peau de soie gown; with a tiara of rhinestones and pearl-beads; and carried a cascade of pink roses. Honi Cooper, sister of the bride, was junior maid of honour. She wore a pink organdy dress, which had white embroidered flowers on the skirt; and a pink organdy headband encrusted with pearl-beads. Junior bridesmaids were: Marcia Zacks, and Gale Cohen, nieces of the groom. Each wore a gown identical with that of the junior maid of honour, and all three carried cascade bouquets of pink roses. Bernard Papernick, of Kitchener, Ont., was best man. Ushers were: Ernie Cooper, brother of the bride; Ray Cohen, brother-in-law of the groom; Lionel Mansberg, and Rubin Zacks, cousins of the groom; Sheldon Kosky, Gordon Strauss, Louis Strauss, and Harry Strauss, cousins of the bride. White arbors of red and pink roses extended the full length of the aisle. A dinner and reception followed. The head table and individual tables were decorated with red and pink roses. Mrs. Cooper, mother of the bride, wore a pink peau de soie gown, embroidered with lace and pearl-beads; with hat to match. Mrs. Zacks, mother of the groom, wore a pale rose-coloured peau de soie gown, trimmed with sequins; and her hat matched it. Each had an orchid wristlet, tinted to match her gown. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Zacks left for a honeymoon trip to Israel and Europe, the bride wearing a white, knitted suit, with a white hat. They will reside at 34 Cornell Avenue, Kitchener, Ont. Mrs. Donald Sterling, as matron of honour, was gowned in pale primrose organza, with bouffant skirt caught at the waist by a darker velvet sash. She had a matching organza picture hat; and carried yellow Sweetheart roses. Arnold Echenberg was best man. The ushers were: Daniel Wainberg, Marvin Smith, Hascal Rosen, and Donald Sterling. Standards of stocks and apple blossoms arranged with foliage were the wedding decorations. Mrs. Sterling, mother of the bride, was in a sheath gown of pink silk with matching coat; also a small hat of feather petals; and had a corsage of pink orchids. Mrs. Shapray, mother of the groom, was in a gown of rose-coloured silk, fashioned with a bodice of Alencon lace. Her matching velvet hat was trimmed with veiling. The reception was held at the Benvenuto Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Shapray spent their wedding trip in Hawaii. They have taken up residence at 3495 Mountain Place. In Toronto, for the marriage were his parents; and Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Shapray, 3495 Mountain Place.

A PAGE AND A HALF OUT OF HANSARD: "PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF PRIME MINISTER OF ISRAEL"

proud to know today that it is a democratic socialist state which has conducted a successful experiment that is no longer an experiment but a reality that really works. Except for a short period when he became a shepherd, Mr. Ben-Gurion has been a premier. A shepherd named David became a king; a premier named David became a shepherd. He is a prophet in the land of prophets. The rewarding rehabilitation program being undertaken in Israel follows the biblical instructions even in Leviticus 19:23:

And man realizing his loss, must set out to clothe the land with trees.

That great English orator, political philosopher and statesman, Edmund Burke, said:

The nerve that never relaxes, the eye that never blenches, the thought that never wanders — these are the masters of victory.

How aptly do these words apply to Premier Ben-Gurion, our guest today, the head of a state that has nourished democracy, where it has blossomed, and has caused the desert to bloom, giving new life and hope to millions.

"Manifest Destiny" a century ago. He would be equally emphatic today in rejecting the so-called "continentalist theory" which would in effect reduce our country to a donkey economy.

Macdonald would say that Canadians in our day, no less than in his own, must be imbued with national purpose; must be concerned with national development; and must remain steadfast in their national loyalty. To Canadian youth Sir John would say: "You have a country to serve and a nation to build! Do not fail in your duty!" He would, I think, command to all of us the words he used in the closing days of his life: "With my utmost effort, with my latest breath, I will oppose the 'veiled treason' which would lure our people from their allegiance".

Throughout most of his political life, Sir John was a parliamentary opponent of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and yet it was Laurier who paid the greatest tribute to him at the time of his death:

"Today we deplore the loss of him whom we all unite in saying was the foremost Canadian of his time and who filled the largest place in Canadian history. In fact, the place of Sir John A. Macdonald in this country was so large and so absorbing that it is almost impossible to conceive that the politics of this country — the fate of this country — will continue without him. There were in his life features so prominent and so conspicuous that already they shine with a radiance which time cannot alter . . . His actions displayed a far reaching vision beyond the event of the day, and, still higher, permeating the whole, a broad patriotism, a devotion to Canada's welfare, Canada's advancement and Canada's glory. It may be said without any exaggeration whatsoever that the life of Sir John Macdonald, from the day he entered parliament, is the history of Canada. He was connected and associated with all of the events, all of the facts and all of the developments which brought Canada from the position that Canada then occupied . . . the position of two small provinces having nothing in common but the common allegiance and united by a bond of paper but nothing else . . . to the present state of development which Canada has reached."

And if you are interested in our growth since 1891, consider that when Sir John died the total population of Canada was less than 5 millions and only 349,346 of these lived west of the Great Lakes. Less than the population of Hamilton lived west of Ontario. The total budget for all Canada in the year that Sir John died was $36,343,567. That is just about the amount this one province of Ontario now spends on mental hospitals alone.

So far as I know no school or institution in all Ontario, unless it is Macdonald Hall at the Ontario Agricultural College, bears Sir John's name. There are a few schools named for him in Quebec. How strange that in the city of Toronto, where he was so often acclaimed in his lifetime, not even a public building bears his name.

Perhaps the city fathers will decide to name the great expanse in front of the new City Hall, Macdonald Square; perhaps on the occasion of his 150th birthday a few years hence they will rename stately University Avenue, Macdonald Drive; perhaps other Canadian cities will also decide to honor his memory. I say "perhaps," because on January 11th last year, Sir John's birthday passed unnoticed throughout the nation — even on Parliament Hill. The press of Canada likewise ignored the event. No doubt it will be the same this year.

Take a look at the calendar on your wall. You will probably find that it notes the birthdays of several U.S. Presidents and perhaps of many other celebrities, but no mention of Sir John A. or, for that matter, of any other Canadian. How are we to explain this gross neglect of the great Patriot statesman, whose vision, high courage and unremitting toil put our people on the road to nationhood; who established what is now called the Canadian Identity; who set before us a clear-cut National Purpose, and above all else, whose National Policies gave Canadians sovereign control of what is often described as the world's richest half continent, the real development of which has hardly begun.

How can we fail to think of Sir John A. when we hear the words of the stirring Canadian folk song:

"This land is your land, this land is my land,
From Bonavista to Vancouver Island,
From the Arctic Circle to the Great Lake waters;
This land was made for you and me."

Almost seventy years have now passed since Macdonald was laid to rest beside his mother at Kingston, the city in which he grew to manhood, practiced law and represented in parliament for most of his life. Hon. W. F. Nickle, for many years Attorney-General of Ontario, was a mere youth in Kingston when Sir John was buried there. On June 6th every year thereafter, until his own death, he laid a wreath on the grave of the old chieftain. I believe his son, Hon. William M. Nickle, now Minister of Commerce and Development for Ontario, has been carrying on the practice.

What other Canadian more richly merits our country's homage and gratitude? But I wonder if on this day — Sir John's birthday — anyone else will bother to pay tribute to the Father of Canada.

FORMER U. S. PRISON PSYCHOLOGIST AT NURNBERG

threatened some day the actual survival of the human species, Dr. Gilbert added:

"I can recognize the need to repress guilt both in individuals and in nations. All human nature rebels against guilt. But for an individual or a nation to repress it altogether is dangerous to the recognition of reality and the ability to survive.

"When we forget the source of bigotry, then this becomes a danger to the whole race of mankind. There is no more potent murder weapon than race hatred."

"We have to know where to apply the freedom of speech principle and where to limit it. We are not allowed to shout 'Fire!' in a theater, nor to engage in slander of other individuals. Yet we are allowing Nazi-type persons to move around advocating the same thing that was involved at the Nurnberg trials fifteen years ago. Such persons are criminals, not entitled to freedom of speech."

Dr. Gilbert, who is president of the Inter-American Society of Psychology, an organization of psychologists and psychiatrists of North and South America, says of the Nazi figures who participated in the mass murders of Jews that all of them were to some extent socio-pathic, schizoid personalities — either born that way or made that way by their training.

The Storm Troop training of Nazi Germany was designed to produce such personality types, he said, where the persons themselves become devoid of human feelings and empathy for other people, and who move through life as "walking robots," willing to murder endlessly without ever suffering the guilt that would drive ordinary people mad, says the New York Herald Tribune. Yet, he said, these persons were not insane; they knew what they were doing when they participated in the extermination of human populations.

As a certain used-car dealer in Tel Aviv has learned, Judge Benyamin Halevi is not a man to be toyed with. The judge, one of the three who are sitting in the trial of Adolf Eichmann, had just bought a car from the dealer when he took it for a spin and a piston rod broke. "Should that happen to a car that has been driven only 20,000 miles!" the judge asked a mechanic. "I don't know, Judge," the mechanic replied, "but I think the car has gone four or five times as far as that."

The judge went to garages from one end of Tel Aviv to the other, interviewed mechanics and dug for records of the car's maintenance until he could establish how much use the car had had, says the New York Times. He brought the offending dealer to justice for having unlawfully turned back the speedometer.

The persistence of Judge Halevi, and his fiercely independent spirit, are all too well known to the Israeli Government. It tried by legislation to discourage him from naming himself to sit in judgment of Eichmann. The judge's friends say the Government should have known better than to try to steer him anywhere.

His findings played an important part in the downfall of two governments — those of Premier Moshe Sharett in 1956 and of Premier David Ben-Gurion in 1961.

In the latter case Judge Halevi sat in the secret trial of an unidentified army officer whom Israeli censorship permits to be referred to only as the "third man." The officer was found to have given false testimony in the so-called Lavon affair to blame Pinhas Lavon for a disastrous adventure carried out in 1954 when Mr. Lavon was Defense Minister.

The disastrous adventure was believed to have involved an Israeli spy mission. Mr. Lavon was blamed for the failure of the venture and was compelled to resign in 1955. He was replaced in that post by Mr. Ben-Gurion, who came out of retirement.

Soon after the trial of the "third man" began last fall, the Lavon affair broke into the open and aroused a storm of controversy. Mr. Ben-Gurion, unwilling to accept his coalition Cabinet's exoneration of Mr. Lavon, resigned as Premier, bringing down his Government. Mr. Ben-Gurion now continues in office in a caretaker role.

In the events that led to Premier Sharett's resignation in 1955, Judge Halevi sat in a libel case involving the late Dr. Israel Kastner, a prominent figure in Israel's dominant Mapai party, who during the war had dealt personally with Eichmann in efforts to rescue some Hungarian Jews, says the New York Times. In his long opinion the judge was extremely harsh about dealings between Jews and Nazis. He declared that Dr. Kastner had "sold his soul to the devil."

The case raised a storm of recriminations in Israel. Dr. Kastner was assassinated on his doorstep in Tel Aviv and the Government fell because of the support Mapai had given him.

Last January the Government presented a bill in the Knesset (Parliament) providing that, in cases before the district courts in which the accused faces the death penalty, the president of the court shall be a Supreme Court justice. The bill was criticized as a device to discourage Judge Halevi, who is president of the Jerusalem District Court, from participating in the Eichmann trial.

When Judge Halevi nominated himself to sit in judgment on Eichmann, his friends said he felt compelled to do it to preserve the independence of Israel's courts.

Judge Halevi is a refugee from Germany, where he was born May 6, 1910. He studied at Freiburg, Goettingen, and Berlin Universities and got his doctorate in law at the Berlin institution in 1933, the year Hitler rose to power. In that year the Judge left for Palestine, where he spent a year on an agricultural settlement.

He was appointed a magistrate in Jerusalem in 1938 after he had practiced law. Nine years later he was made Chief Magistrate and acting District Court Judge. In 1948, when the state of Israel was established, he was the first judge appointed to Jerusalem District Court and was made its president in the same year.

Judge Halevi, small, pleasant, a bit pedantic and given to understatement, is endearing to most people. He talks little of himself, and rather more about his son and daughter, both of whom are studying at Hebrew University, says the New York Times. The only hint of his independent character is in the slightly untamed look of his hair.

Only once did he come close to giving in to the pressure of forces against him — in 1953, when he was passed up for appointment to the Supreme Court. He offered his resignation, but withdrew it soon afterward.

IS THE EICHMANN TRIAL JUSTICE—OR REVENGE?

No trial in history has been covered as carefully (and as candidly) as the trial of Adolf Eichmann. Now The Saturday Evening Post digs behind the headlines and by-lines—and examines the true meaning of the Eichmann trial. You'll learn how the trial has affected the booming state of Israel (and the booming state of Germany). How the trial may dramatically change the course of history. Why many Jews are actually willing to free Eichmann. And why Eichmann may not be the man Israel really wants! Read "The Meaning of the Eichmann Trial" in this week's Post.

Exciting Discoveries In Crevices Of Rocks Hidden In Judean Desert Caves

Recently, word came from Jerusalem that an archaeological team headed by Professor Yigael Yadin of the Hebrew University, had made further discoveries in the Judean Desert caves, shedding more light on the Bar Kochba revolt. The following is a full report from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem:

The second season of excavations in the Judean Desert caves overlooking the Dead Sea, which came to an end on the eve of Passover, has yielded a wealth of material which, in quantity, far exceeds that discovered during the first season last year. As to its quality, it is already clear, even though most of the material has still to be examined, that it is of the utmost importance not only because of the further light it sheds on the period of the Bar Kochba revolt, but also because it provides a new insight into the life and culture that prevailed during the Chalcolithic period (about 5,000 years ago).

As during the first season, the expedition was carried out under the auspices of the Hebrew University, the Government Department of Antiquities, and the Israel Exploration Society, and was fully supported by the Israel Army. The team of 150 (apart from the Army), including volunteers from kibbutzim (settlements) and Hebrew University students, was divided into four groups, each of which was assigned a specific area to explore under the leadership of Prof. N. Avigad, Dr. Y. Aharoni and Prof. Y. Yadin, all of the Hebrew University, and P. Baradon, of the Department of Antiquities. Most of the work was carried out in the same caves as last year, and therefore under the same extremely difficult conditions presented by the terrain.

Immediately after the first day of Passover the leaders of the expedition reported on their finds at a press conference held at the University. Their reports were of necessity of a preliminary nature only, and will be followed by fuller accounts later this month.

In all of the caves were found further relics of the period of the Bar Kochba revolt. Prof. Yadin's group, exploring the cave in which the Bar Kochba letters were discovered last year, brought to light a large bundle of some forty to fifty papyri, which have yet to be opened, as well as five small papyri, rolled so that they resemble cigars. Of the five, three have so far been opened, and from the contents, which deal with administrative-legal matters, it would seem that they are part of the archives of the Bar Kochba rebel headquarters in the Ein Gedi district. They are written in beautiful Mishnaic Hebrew, and are clearly dated. One, for instance, bears the inscription "2 Kislev, the third year of Shimon Ben Kosba, Nasi Yisrael" (134 C.E.).

The Papyri in the large bundle, as far as can be judged at present, are all inscribed in Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek, except for one which is still to be chemically examined. Another find was a roll of parchment in a hollow reed, in extracting which the services of a University neuro-surgeon, Prof. A. Pellar, were used. Two papyri, still to be opened, were also found by Mr. Baradon's team, while Dr. Aharoni's group, too, came across tiny scattered fragments of papyri which were most likely the remnants of scrolls taken away by Bedouins. In addition, both groups found a number of ostraka.

In all the caves were found skeletons, skulls, and human bones. In the cave explored by Dr. Aharoni as many as about forty skeletons were discovered, most of them of women and children, which seems to indicate that the majority of the men were killed in battle outside the caves. Many graves were revealed in certain of the caves, and in some cases wooden coffins. Prof. Avigad described one such coffin, which he said was of a type never before found in Palestine. It was made of bone and red wood, and decorated in a geometric design. In one coffin there was a skeleton wearing shoes and wrapped in a shroud.

The graves as well as other finds give rise to the belief that the rebels and their families lived in the caves for a long time. There were remnants of garments, sandals, ropes, lamps, knives, household utensils, and food. Prof. Yadin's team also found a very large net, probably used for bird-catching; a bundle of six keys, one of which was big enough to open a gate; two Roman vessels similar to those brought to light last year; and a woman's hand mirror, again similar to that discovered last year.

Also unearthed were a number of coins. Prof. Avigad and Prof. Yadin each turned up a coin which bore the inscription "Shimon" on one side and "Yherut Yerushalaim" on the other. Most of the finds were made in the crevices of rocks which were so well covered that they were completely hidden from view. It was clear, according to Prof. Yadin, that the people who lived in the caves had had time to hide their valuables carefully, probably hopeful that the day would come when they would be able to take them away when they left the caves.

During last year's excavations the groups headed by Prof. Avigad and Mr. Baradon found, in addition to the relics of the Roman Period, also traces of the Chalcolithic (early Bronze) era. This year they again brought to light objects dating back to this period, and Mr. Baradon's group made a discovery which was truly sensational.

The discovery consisted of a treasure of four hundred and thirty-nine items, wrapped in matting, comprising 200 bronze maceheads, bronze tools such as chisels and hammers, decorated jars, several objects in ivory, and one stone vessel. Some of the items are familiar from previous finds relating to the period, but most of them are new and unknown, even their purpose is not clear, and have yet to be examined thoroughly. Mr. Baradon thinks they may have belonged to a temple or palace and were taken to the cave as the spoils of battle.

The find is one of the most outstanding yet to have been made by archaeologists in Israel, both from the point of view of quantity and quality. The items reveal perfect craftmanship as well as exceptional beauty of design, and will contribute in an extremely large degree to our knowledge of the history of human culture and of art in ancient times.

In addition to the above cache, Mr. Baradon's group found a quantity of cereals, also dating back to the Chalcolithic period, which is now being examined by David V. Zaitschek, a University botanist interested in Prehistoric and Archaeological botany and especially the origin of cultivated plants. Mr. Zaltschek has already arrived at the conclusion that the wheat found in the cave is the "missing link" between the wild two-grained wheat (Triticum dicoccoides) discovered in Israel by Aaron Aaronsohn fifty-five years ago, and the primitive hard wheat

CLASS IN COOKERY

STRAWBERRY SPONGE CAKE SHELLS

one tablespoon orange juice
one teaspoon lemon juice
one cup sugar
grated rind of one-half lemon grated rind of one-half orange one and one-half cups sifted potato starch

Using two mixing bowls, separate the yolks from whites of four eggs. Add remaining egg to the egg yolks. Beat egg yolks until very thick and continue beating while adding sugar until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Add grated rinds and juices. Add potato flour gradually, cutting and folding into batter until flour disappears. Beat egg whites until they form stiff peaks and fold into cake batter carefully. Pour mixture into ungreased muffin pan filling about two-thirds full. Bake at 350 degrees for twenty-five minutes. Remove from oven. When cool run knife around the edge of each cake to release it and shake cakes out. Cut off the cap of muffins. Top with whipped cream and fresh, sweetened, sliced strawberries.

EXCITING DISCOVERIES

species cultivated by the Arabs here for hundreds of years.

This missing link, the emmer wheat (Triticum dicoccum or cultivated two-grained glume wheat, the biblical "kussemet") has never before been found in this country, and was probably supplanted already in antiquity by the more successful naked, hard wheat species. As, a result, the history of the cultivated wheat species was not properly understood up till now.

The recent finds include, for the first time, not carbonised remains of cereal grains such as were found in other excavations, but whole spikelets with perfectly preserved glumes and paleae (husks and chaff), making it possible to determine the species and even the variety concerned. In the arid conditions of the desert caves only the colour of the plant material underwent a change, so that further histological and microchemical investigations can now be carried out.

Other cereal finds, not less important for an understanding of the origin of cultivated plants, relate to spikelets of einkorn, a primitive, cultivated, wheat species found for the first time in Israel and spikelets, grains, even a whole spike of two-rowed cultivated barley, the ancestral wild species of which has till now grown in the valley of the Judean Desert.

STAR TIME (1)
This week we thought we'd tell you about some of the stars in the Snider organization — some of the people who are available to entertain you at that important function that you're planning.
Among them there's Tommy Ambrose, host of that happy CBC-TV series "While We're Young" last summer, and currently star of "Club 6" on the same station.
He's played the "Jack Kane Show" and "World of Music" — and the critics say he's the best young singer in the country; and for once we agree with them.
He can help make your next party unforgettable.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Presence in Gallery of Prime Minister of Israel

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the house I should like to refer to the presence in the gallery of the Prime Minister of Israel, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, the valiant nation builder of modern Israel. He is not unknown to Canada, having been here on more than one occasion, the first of which was in 1917 or 1918 when, following the Balfour declaration for the acceptance of the setting up of a national home for the Jews, he belonged to the Royal Fusiliers who were then taking their training in Windsor, Nova Scotia.

Throughout the years he has given leadership to his country. Our distinguished visitor is no stranger to parliament. He has served in the knesset, the parliament of his country, for many years, and represents that belief in parliamentary democracy which has been an essential element of his life and dedication. He comes from a land where our religious faith originated and from which many of the values of western civilization have been derived. Since the creation of his country in 1948 the people have been engaged in a remorseless struggle against climate and economics. As the leader of that nation he has earned admiration for the perseverance which has enabled him and those associated with him to meet almost insuperable obstacles in the directions I have indicated.

We welcome him to Canada for the position which he occupies, and for the contribution that the people of the Jewish race have made to Canada over a period of slightly more than 200 years. I am sure I speak for hon. members everywhere when I say that we extend to him the warmest of greetings and good wishes, and through him to the president and people of Israel.

Hon. Paul Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Leader of the Opposition and on behalf of the Liberal opposition I am happy to join the Prime Minister in extending a sincere welcome to Canada and to this parliament, to the distinguished Prime Minister of Israel, the head of government in that dynamic little state.

On the occasion of his visit to this parliament it is appropriate that we should remind ourselves that Canada has been in the forefront of almost every vital step in the development of the state of Israel since 1947, when partition was first voted. This, too, is an occasion to recall that partition itself was urged and actively supported by the Canadian representative on the United Nations special committee on Palestine, Hon. Mr. Justice Rand, then of the Supreme Court of Canada. It was he who, along with others, pleaded for the creation of a Jewish state.

Then, of course, I am sure that all members will recognize the fact that it was the Leader of the Opposition who actively led the move to admit the newly created state of Israel to the family of nations. Canadians generally, I think, are proud that he has been recognized for those efforts.

The applause that greeted the remarks of the Prime Minister, when he extended a welcome to Mr. David Ben-Gurion, as prolonged and as sincere as any we have had in a long time in receiving a foreign visitor, indicates our admiration not only for Israel but for the great statesman who is its prime minister. Mr. David Ben-Gurion is a man of action but he is also a man of thought. Like Balfour and Smuts, he has been able to combine the qualities of the statesman with those of one who loves philosophy and learning generally. His life has been dedicated to the survival of the Jewish people. History will demonstrate that, along with Herzl and Weizmann, he is truly one of the fathers of his country, this boy who at the age of 17 left Russia to come to what he calls Zion. Mr. David Ben-Gurion is a man of the world, and he has fought for the rights of man everywhere.

The Prime Minister mentioned yesterday that he recalled with satisfaction his own visit to Israel, and I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if I may just make this personal note. The last time I saw Mr. David Ben-Gurion was in the desert, in his kibbutz, in Israel. I shall never forget the remarkable and memorable day I had with him there in 1958. So in welcoming him here today I can characterize our visitor in no better words than those used in 1958 by Hadassah in its award to Israel's premier for distinguished humanitarian service;

With insight derived of wisdom, with perseverance and courage inspired by prophetic vision, guided always by the spiritual teachings of the holy Bible, he has translated the moral concepts of our ancient heritage into a humane and democratic leadership, thus assuring for Israel and himself a unique and honourable place in the history of man's struggle for freedom.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the national leader of the C.C.F., I am very happy to join in the words of welcome expressed by the Prime Minister and the hon. member for Essex East to Premier Ben-Gurion, who I understand was exiled by Turkey in the first world war, later came to Canada, trained in Windsor, Nova Scotia, under British guidance and later served with the British forces in the Jewish legion; who fought against evil at that time and who has been working for all that is good ever since.

Independence came to his country 13 years ago as a result of his guidance and decision. We are

Sir John A. Macdonald: The Great Canadian

Pericles: "Fix your eyes on the greatness of your country as you have it before you day by day, fall in love with her, and when you feel her great, remember that her greatness was won by men with courage, with knowledge of their duty, and with a sense of honor in action, who even if they failed in some venture, would not think of depriving the country of their powers but laid them at her feet as their fairest offering."

BY GORDON SINCLAIR

(Sir John A. Macdonald's birthday, ignored on Parliament Hill and by the press of Canada, was remembered by Gordon Sinclair, nationally known radio and television personality and by Bruce Smith of the C.B.C. Mr. Sinclair's tributes to Sir John A. on his radio program, "Let's Be Personal", from C.F.R.B. on January 11, 1960 and 1961 are here combined, with some slight changes, into a single text. It is made available in this form in the hope that it will stimulate interest in the life and role of the Great Canadian, and that in future years his birthday will be observed in a manner worthy of his massive contribution to the nation.)

We often hear the expression, "Father of His Country". Well, this is the birthday of the Father of Canada. Sir John A. Macdonald, in my book the greatest Canadian statesman, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on January 11, 146 years ago.

He was not only the first Prime Minister of Canada but in a parliamentary life of 47 years, Sir John was a cabinet minister for 33 years, holding almost every post. He became the first Prime Minister of Canada in 1867, and until his death in 1891 there were only five years when he was not Prime Minister.

Sir John A. was not only the father of his country but, without Macdonald and those who stood with him, there would be no Canada stretching from coast to coast today. There would be no national economy. Amid the greatest of hardship, at a time when power tools were unknown and money was almost impossible to find, Macdonald's government completed the C.P.R., and thus helped to bind the nation-to-be into a coast-to-coast pattern.

With scoop shovels and horses, Chinese coolies, and timbers for trestle, the railway went through the forest, the muskeg, the great plains and the rocky mountains. It went through on human toil, human courage and imagination.

Macdonald had to put down rebellion and meet the constant cry of secession from the Maritimes. He had to feel his way toward a national policy with no pattern to guide him and few friends to help him. While skilful in the handling of men, he was perhaps not a man of great intellect nor was he a great debater. He was often overcome by melancholy. He had trouble at home. No man in all Canadian political life ever stood up to such intense criticism as did Sir John.

In fact there was a time in 1887 when every newspaper in Canada, except the Montreal Gazette, was denouncing Macdonald because of his national views and national vision of a national Canada. You can't separate the word Macdonald from the word national.

He refused to compromise and refused to surrender his idea and his aim of a Canada that stretched from sea to sea. Such was his intensely determined Canadianism. Historians agree, as do those Canadians who think about it, that without Macdonald the vision of Confederation would have dissolved, we would have separated into geographical fragments, and much of what is now Canada would long ago have been taken over by the United States. The very word Canada might be missing today but for the herculean efforts of this often tired but always determined Scot.

The whole burden of the assault against Macdonald was that it was simply not physically, financially, or politically possible to keep a thin line of more than 3,000 miles bordering the United States a going concern. All the natural flow was North and South. How then could this stubborn man feel that he could defy nature and cause the flow to go East and West?

Let's get out of this madness, they said, cut our losses while we can and be our separate selves. Every day, in some part of the country, this cry was raised. To go over some of the old newspapers and see the bitterness of the attacks in word and picture is to wonder how the rugged old warrior ever stood up to it.

Far, far simpler for him to throw it all up, remind himself that failure often comes from effort, and quit trying. But, until the day of his death on Saturday, June the 6th, 1891, Macdonald, often tormented by his own doubts, refused to accept this defeatism.

It makes me wonder what Sir John would think if he came back today to see hundreds of our largest corporations owned and controlled by the United States where all of the policy decisions are made. What would he think of Canada selling her raw materials for a dime and buying back the finished product for a dollar, and of Canada without a flag of her own? What would he think of Canadians who advocate that our economy should be integrated with that of the United States; and of those who go further and argue that it is the destiny of Canada to become part of the United States?

In his own lifetime Sir John left no doubt where he stood on such questions. He gave a firm and resounding answer to the slogan
